RocksEm @RocksEm · 23 Jun 2011
@cshenkel because the 173 is Lee's ISP/Host, not the user. What good is it in tracking the user?

RocksEm @RocksEm · 23 Jun 2011
@cshenkel maybe. or it could be as described in the bluecoat thing & it is only calling for non-cached pages.

RocksEm @RocksEm · 23 Jun 2011
@cshenkel @Stranahan that and more. it might also insure your server is trying to pull some shenanigans on visitors.

RocksEm @RocksEm · 23 Jun 2011
@cshenkel the bluecoat thing is entirely different. that is being utilized to scan traffic. not hide a user's IP.

RocksEm @RocksEm · 23 Jun 2011
@cshenkel That has nothing to do with the ips recorded in the web access log. that log would only be for that server.

RocksEm @RocksEm · 23 Jun 2011
@cshenkel hand off described in that paper is for managing web traffic. the change would be in server responding.

RocksEm @RocksEm · 23 Jun 2011
@cshenkel Many sites do not allow known proxies. A program can be used which blocks any access.

RocksEm @RocksEm · 23 Jun 2011
@cshenkel where does the second IP resolve to? If it's different from that proxy then what use has using the proxy served?

1

@cshenkel @Stranahan What you are suggesting in that PDF totally defeats the purpose of a proxy.
1

RocksEm @RocksEm · 23 Jun 2011

RocksEm @RocksEm · 23 Jun 2011

RocksEm @RocksEm · 23 Jun 2011
@cshenkel @Stranahan It's that simple. I do web page statistics.

@az5thdstrct Right. once dic pic comes out B&V are superfluous. All they do is distract from Weiner's guilt.

@ezradulis @Stranahan The cap of Weiner's tweet is a standalone he could have right clicked and opened in it's own tab to screencap.

RocksEm @RocksEm · 1 Jun 2011
@ezradulis @Stranahan Doing this would have caused his timeline to update showing Weiner's deletion. He must have been following Weiner.

RocksEm @RocksEm · 1 Jun 2011
